House of Representatives.

Washington, Friday, 3 P. M.
Long before 12 o'clock all the galleries of the House were filled; and over 300 ladies were preseat to attend the funeral of the late Mr. ROSHER,
M. C., from Red River, Louisiana, who died yesterday morning.

Precisely at 12 o'clock the Speaker and Clerk en tered the hall having long white scarls on. The House was called over, and the journal read. The

The priests then commenced the service by repeating the usual prayers, in Latin, of the Catholic church on such occasions. Two priests then walked round the corpse, and sprinkled it six times with holy water; they then walked round it again and sprinkled it, or shook the incense jar over it six times. They then repeated another prayer, and the Rev. Dr. Rider went into the Clerk's desk and delivered a culogium on the deceased. He also explained the reason of using holy water and incense; and then told the members generally that their conduct was any thing but such as to entitle them to the respect of the people, and that they must learn to govern themselves before they thought of governing others.

THE CANTON TEA COMPANY,

Precisely at 12 o'clock the Speaker and Clerk entered the hall having long white scarfs on. The House was called over, and the journal read. The House was called over, and the journal read. The House was very full.

In a few minutes the members of the U. S. Senate entered preceded by their President and Secretary dressed in white scarfs.

The body was then brought in covered with the velvet pail, preceded by five Catholic priests in white muslin robes, and two boys; one holding a golden censor filled with burning incense and holy waier; the other holding a large cracitix. The latter with two lighted wax candles, were placed at the head of the corpse. The priests stood at the foot of it. The President of the Senate took his seat on the right of the Clerk of the House. The Senate sat in the body of the House.

The Committee of Aerangements and the Pall Bearers, wearing long white scarfs, sat down round the corpse in the area in front of the Clerk's desk.

Then there was a dead sile ace of several minutes; at last the House sprung up instanter, and there came down the aisle the President, Secretaries of State, War, Navy and Treasury; all looking very melancholy, particularly Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Tyler.

Gen. Scott, in full uniform, entered and took his seat by the side of John W. Davis, who lately moved to abelish his office. Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Tyler sat down around the dead with their bitterest reviers.

The priests then commenced the service by repeating the usual prayers, in Latin, of the Catholic church on such occasions. Two priests them walk.
